The Royal Medical Society (RMS) was founded in 1737 with the aim of furthering the medical education of its members and building links amongst medical students. The RMS has a rich and interesting past and is the only student society to have been awarded a royal charter. The society’s notable members include Charles Darwin, Sir Joseph Lister and Sir James Young Simpson, Joseph Bell.

As the MedSoc of the University of Edinburgh, RMS continues this tradition through hosting regular academic talks and tutorials most Tuesdays and social events throughout the year in our premises which is located in the Student Centre at Potterrow, Bristo Square. Older RMS members provide invaluable exam tutorials prior to exams to ensure you have a good understanding of course content. To further prepare you, a membership will also allow you to gain access to our revision guide. Furthermore, we present members with opportunities for travel and study funding to carry out research and electives. An RMS membership is definitely worthwhile when studying medicine in Edinburgh!

Note: Our talks can be attended by members and non-members!
